Woodcock And Mills Considered

MIAMI BEACH, July 12 (AP) -Wearled by marathon pre-liminaries, the Democratic National Convention prepared to nominate Sen. George McGovern for President Wednesday.

After the raucous and long ssions it took to seat delegates and draft a platform, the convention's main event looked easy. The Associated Press count delegate commitments put Sen. McGovern well over the top with 1,613.75 votes, with only 1,500 needed for the first-ballot nomination, Gov. George C. Wal-lace had 383 delegates as the Ballotting on the presidential nomination was not expected to take place until approximately 0400 GMT.

The only suspense left was over Sen. McGovern's choice of a vice-presidential running mate. One pame topped every list of prospects, that of Sen, Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, who said he does not want to run for national office in 1972. The list that counted was Sen. McGovern's own, said to contain four or five names, for the senator from South Dakota will have his way when the convention makes the vice-presidential choice (Aware that Sen. Kennedy probably would say no. Sen. McGovern's closest aides said they believe Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida, who delivered the keynote speech last night cornpictely in step with Sen. WASHINGTON, July 12 (AP). Serious crime in the United States during the first three months of the year rose only 1 percent, the lowest first-quarter increase in 11 years, the Justice Department announced today.

The rate of increase was 6 percent a year ago, and 13 percent Attorney General Richard G.

Kleindienst, in releasing the figwes from the FBI's Uniform Crime Report for January through March, also said that 80 of the nation's largest cities reported reductions in serious crime in the first three months of 1972

In 1971, 59 cities showed a decrease, while only 22 had a decline in 1970, he said. In the six cities with more than a million population, the number of serious crimes rose 6 percent, one-half of the 1971 increase. The report divides serious crime into two categories-violent, which includes murder, forcible rape, robbery and aggravated assault, and property, which includes burgiary, larceny of $50 or more and auto theft.

Violent crime, which makes up about 13 percent of the total index of offenses in the crime report, increased 2 percent in the first quarter of 1972, compared to R 13 percent increase during the same period in 1971.

Pawn Captured In the first move today, the 41st of the game, Spassky captured the pawn. Fischer recaptured with his king and the game turned into an effort by Fischer to push his pawns a square at time to the last rank under the escort of his king. Suddenly, after five minutes of play and some indecisive sparring, Fischer stood bolt upright, spoke animatedly to chief referee Lothar Schmid, of West Germany, then disappeared with his long, rolling gait through the course of the play was astonish-ing in retrospect: Spassky made no attempt to hasten exploitation of the slight advantage which the white pieces and first move gave him, in contrast to the last game between the two, when he attacked strongly.

Until Fischer's costly pawn capture at the 39th move, the game proceeded dully, with Spassky inviting exchanges and the prospect of a colorless draw.

Protestants Flaunt Power in Ulster Parades

(Continued from Page 1) Catholic minority, however, the parade is steeped in religious symbols and obsessions. Every aspect of the parade-the sashes, the sabers, the songs and espe-cially the sound: of the big lambeg drum—are bluntly designed to point up Protestant supremacy over the minority.

Each lodge was led by a powerful youth who pounded the lam-beg drum until blood dripped from his fingers—an expected part of the march. The pounding of the drums symbolizes "Ulster is Protestant, Ulster is safe."

The Belfast march began near the center of the city and weaved for three bours through the downtown and Sandy Road area to Edenderry, a park outside the city, for beer, box lunches and political speeches. Angry speeches condemned Mr. Whitelaw for meeting the IRA and supported the Protestant militia, the Ulster Defense Association, which has rapidly emerged as a powerful armed force in the province.

The Rev. Donald Gillies, an Orange Order leader, declared: To bracket the IRA and the UDA and mete out equal condemnation to both shows an astonishing lack of understanding of the difference between an army pledged to the destruction of the state and a defense association committed to British al-

McGovern's Ideas Written Into Platform

Wallace Amendments Are All Defeated

Gov. Wallace opposed approved busing students as one of several tools to achieve quality education. Other Wallace amendments inouted down by voice vote would have cut federal spending and welfare aid and called for the strongest possible national defense and a withdrawal from Indochina "with honor." More detailed Wallace proposals would have permitted pravers in public schools, opposed controls on handguns, permitted states to impose the death penalty and required federal judges to submit to periodic popular referenda or Senate confirmation

Also rejected by voice vote was a tax-reform proposal sponsored by Senator Fred Harris, of Oklahoma, which he said was stronger than that in the platform. His amendment would have replaced the present income tax with a sharply graduated levy which he said would make the rich pay their share.

Sen. McGovern favored the Harris proposal as a goal but feared it could cause campaign problems and said he hoped his supporters would reject it. The vote for and against sounded about equal to this reporter, but the presiding officer declared it defeated.

After 11 of the 28 proposed amendments were defeated by voice vote, the first roll call was taken on an amendment pledging a guaranteed income of $6,500 a year for a family of four. The poor people's plank was defeated

1.852.86 to 999.75. Until 2 a.m. the delegates had managed to avoid roll-call votes or any issues. Then the National Welfare Rights Organization made up mainly of black mothers and families on welfare, won the roll call on its guaranteed-income proposal. It took almost an hour and half-emptied the spectators'

Prolonged Roll Calls A second roll call began at 3:35 a.m. and lasted 65 minutes. It resulted in killing a minority plank to legalize abortion. The Platform Committee had decided against any plank on the issue, on the ground it could be need by Republicans against Democratic candidates in Catholic and other areas sensitive to the issue. The vote was 1,572.80 to 1,101,37

In other major decisions, the convention: • Accepted in general the stands proposed by Sen. Mc-Govern by calling for immediate withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam, closing of tax loopholes and replacing the welfare system with income grants. • Rejected proposals favoring non-discrimination against homo-sexuals, a constitutional amendment allowing prayer in public schools and authority for states to impose the death penalty. • Rejected plans for rollback of rents and government takeover and repair of substandard

The rude shock came 11 days ago when the Democratic Credentiels Committee ruled that Mayor Daley had violated virtually every reform guideline in the book and voted to sent Mr. Sings. M. Jackson and other menter

That set the stage for yesterday morning's drama, when Mayor Daley expected that Sen. McGovern—needing the mayor's electoral support would get his troops in step and reinstate the mayor's delegates.

At several points in the past few days, the McGovern forces had considered abandoning the anti-Daisy faction and going all the way with the mayor. For a mixture of reasons, the idea was

"Even if we had wanted to, we couldn't have delivered the vote [against Mayor Daley]," said Gary Hart, Sen. McGovern's Dational campaign director. "That would have been straining our people too far. It would have compromised the senator too much, his posture as a man."

Even early yesterday morning, however, Frank Mankiewicz, Sen. McGovern's top political aide, was urging one last move to placate Mayor Daley. He told Mr. Singer and Mr. Jackson in a private meeting that Sen. McGovern wanted an overnight adjournment, providing time for one last attempt at compromise.

The two insurgents rejected that, figuring they would lose too many votes overnight to sustain their claim to even a share

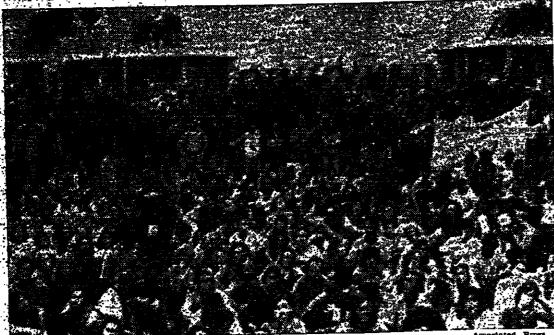

Through much of the long roll call on the Chicago representation, the outcome was in doubt. In a few instances, McGovern delegates obviously swallowed

MIAMI BEACH, July 12 (AP).-More than 300 young demonstrators, many here to boost the candidacy of Sen. George Mc-Govern, barged into the lobby of the senator's hotel headquarters today to protest over reports that he might change his stand on some issues, such as Vietnam and tax reform.

About 200 others marched outside, carrying a banner that read: "Remember, LBJ Promised Peace, Too, in 1964, and He Didn't Deliver.'

Helmeted police initially moved the demonstrators out of the lobby onto the sidewalk, but of them simply moved around the building and found other entrances. When demonstration leaders promised to be peaceful, the police withdrew to the sidelines.

Security was especially heavy at the Doral Beach Hotel following the arrest there of two men earlier in the day for possession of concealed weapons.

"We want McGovern, we want McGovern," the demonstrators demanded

They said they wanted to tell him personally that they did not want him to abandon the issues that sold most of them on his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination, especially his strong anti-war stand.

Divided Party

Even the most optimistic Democrats, who think the Vietnam war, five million unemployed, inflation and the high prices of beef and groceries are sound anti-Nixon election issues, still agree that even a united Democratic party would be in trouble.

But the Democrats have dramatized here in Miami Beach that they are not only not united, but that they are deeply divided on policy, on tactics, and on the priorities before the nation.

Sen. McGovern has won here by emphasizing the importance the young, blacks, and the women. Under his rules, this Democratic convention is undoubtedly less boss-controlled, more representative of the Democratic voters as a whole than the Democratic convention in Chicago in 1968, but by dramatizing the young, the women and the blacks, this convention has in effect

McGovern's Real Fight-Woo Men He Beat minimizes the power of a lot of other voters maybe the majority of those who will decide the election in November. For example, the more Sen. McGovern has tried to make this convention "more representa-tive" by bringing in more women, blacks, and young people, the more he has to deal with the charge that he is leaving out many other groups who have the right to be represented.

This convention has obviously emphasized the young, the women, and the blacks, all of whom had been underrepresented in the past. But in the process it has done two unintended things. It has ignored other powerful groups, who were also underrepresented, and by accommodating the young, the women, and the blacks, it has infuriated a great many voters, maybe a majority, who resent the whole idea of a "quota system," partly because they are left out of it.

Mood of the Voters

He is in real difficulty now, within his party and against the Republicans. But he is gambling. Sen, Humphrey, Sen, Muskie, and Sen. Jackson obviously oppose him in private if not in public. The old Democratic power centers in the cities and in organized labor are against him, but he is gambling on the young and the isues of the future, and he may have struck the mood of the voters in 1972 or misjudged it altogether. And this is really what is at issue in this conventhe prospective jurors has taken on special importance in the eyes of the defense, because the court and the jury selection system had produced a panel with few persons under middle age. Attorners for the defense have complained that younger jurors might be more sympathetic with the issues being raised by the defense.

Yesterday, of the nine men and nine women tentatively seated in the chairs of the 12 jurors and six alternates. Il said they had roting-age children and another eiderly woman was childless. The defense has offered evidence to show that the paucity of younger panelists resulted when more than one-half of 3.000 persons summoned for jury duty were excused upon their request. This weeded out the younger, more active persons, leaving a jury panel that does not represent a cross section of the community, the defense asserted.

Schmidt on Visit To Canada, U.S.

BONN, July 12 (AP).-Helmut Schmidt, who relinquished the defense portfolio to take over as West Germany's new minister for economics and finance last week, flew to Ottawa today to start a 10-day visit to Canada and the United States. An Economics Ministry spokesman said Mr. Schmidt planned introductory visits to the economics and finance ministers of the two countries. He also will confer with his former defense counterparts in the United States and Canada.

The spokesman said Mr. Schmidt, in his capacity as deputy to Bonns new defense minister. Georg Leber, also wants to discuss a new Canadian-German arrangement involving the joint training of troops. Informed sources said Bonn hopes to secure agreement on the joint use of a Canadian base for military

Meanwhile, strikes deprived many Romans of gasoline, fresh milk, bus and streetcar services and some newspapers today, but union leaders timed the walkouts to cause as little disruption and discomfort as possible,

The most disrupting strike began at 9:30 a.m. after the morning rush hour, and ended at 2:30 p.m. The gasoline strike began last night at 8:30 p.m., after motorists were given a full extra day to

Evolution or Revolution?

At a certain stage in every political convention, when the identity of the candidate is pretty well assured, attention naturally turns to the question of how it will end and in what frame of mind, and with what degree of cohesion, the delegates and the party will address themselves to the next business of electing a President. The Democrats are at that point now in Miami Beach. If it is perhaps too early to measure the damage that has been done, or may yet be done, to their party and its prospects, it is not too early for at least a preliminary report on what is happening and on what part of it is old and familiar, and how much of it is almost mind-blowingly new. Is it a singular stride forward-or suicide?

We would begin with what is most familiar -what is being said about the way the Democrats are treating each other and talking about each other in caucuses and hotel corridors and on the convention floor. For a good many people in the news business, not to find discord, dissension, division, disintegration, destruction, death wishes and disaster in a Democratic convention is to dishonor your press credentials. The imperatives of our trade as well as the lessons of history (and perhaps the appeal of the alliteration) combine to encourage this tendency. This makes it all the more natural, in this instance, to zero in upon the stunning diversity of this collection of delegates -on the young, the black, the women, the Chicanos, the hot-eyed idealists, the reformers-for-reform's-sake, the unappeasable party regulars and the earnest, first-time participants. Reform has done its work and the result is quite unlike anything ever assembled by a major political party in history. This can lead easily to the acceptance of the worst forewarnings of the old-timers that the Democrats are embarking on a very bad trip. It is going to be Goldwater all over again, we are being freely advised, and so it may turn out to be.

We would suggest a certain caution about leaping to conclusions of any sort, not because we have any sure sense of our own about how it will all turn out but precisely because we don't-because there is something about the performance of Miami Beach -something in the curious blend of old politics and new-that discourages too easy resort to any analogies. There is the high principle invoked in the California credentials case, and the purest pragmatism publicly acknowledged in the McGovern approach to Illinois. There is a refreshing widedone, and a computerized precision in the way the McGovern machine—there is no behind the scenes. There was Sen. Mc-Govern's full-hearted, unequivocal pledge of allegiance to the women's caucus and the ease with which this was shoved aside within hours in favor of his immediate interests in the vote in the South Carolina case. The old politics is still alive in Miami Beach; the old inducements, from the vice-presidency to platform concessions to shear muscle, are still in play.

This is what makes it dangerous to deal have given rise to it. in analogies. It is said that George Mc-Govern has rendered his nomination valueless by irredeemably splitting the party, but even here we are confronted by a novel sort of split. The odd man is in and it is the party's established supporters, the organization regulars and the legions of organized labor, who supposedly are out. How long they will stay out is far from clear; moreover, making peace with the office-holders and the established power brokers who have the longest involvement in the party and the most to lose could conceivably prove less difficult than reconciliation with the disaffected at one or another extreme. In any case, we know less about how this will work because in the Democratic party we do not have the handy analogy.

What we do have is the rest of the record of the Democratic party; if it has demonstrated a congenital tendency toward selfinflicted wounds in the past, it has also shown over the years an astonishing resiliency-in 1948, when Harry Truman set off on his lonely campaign with the South peeling off after Strom Thurmond and the far left with Henry Wallace; in 1960, when John F. Kennedy had his religion and the earlier, undisguised scorn of Lyndon B. Johnson going against him: in 1968, when Hubert Humphrey carried more freight, mostly of his party's own making, than most candidates, and his principal convention opponent, Eugene McCarthy, who might have made the difference, wandered off to the south of France. The fact is that the Democrats, who are pleased to call themselves the party of the people, have over the years acquired, along with the habit of open, internal conflict, a certain capacity to deal with diversity, and to adjust, however awkwardly and even violently, to fundamental shifts in public sentiment.

We would not argue that the right adjustments are being made in Miami Beach or that Mr. McGovern is necessarily the right man to make them, but simply that something broader and more complicated than a radical youth movement, or a flight into some kind of wild, blue yonder of new politics, is taking place. The speech given on opening night by party chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien, who has not ordinarily been associated in the past with the political New Left, demonstrates this. There is something significantly new in his remarks as there is in the party platform draft: a pronounced reluctance to offer empty promises; a recognition of a need for the restoration of faith in institutions, including politopenness about the way some business is ical parties; an unaccustomed modesty, a refreshing readiness to confess past errors; a willingness to challenge the established other word for it-rolled over its opposition order of things, and to accept rather con-

The heaviest responsibility for dashing the peace hopes of a fortnight ago rests on the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing, though the Protestant Ulster Defense Association cannot escape a share of the blame.

The incident seized on by the "Provos" to end a 13-day cease-fire has the appearance of a deliberate provocation of British troops, arranged by IRA leaders in Belfast who were always hostile to the truce. ### Hubert's Farewell: The Old Guard Is Out

By James Reston

MIAMI BEACH—American Minnesota politics all rose and politics is a savage business. The winners here at Miami like George McGovern, have more to do than they can remember, and the losers, like Hubert Humphrey, have more to forget than they can bear.

Fumphrev couldn't quite make it through his last presidential farewell on television. It was easier for Ed Muskie. As the frontrunner at the beginning, Muskle almost seemed relieved by his defeat at the end. But Humphrey was close to tears.

The contrast between Humphrey's and Muskie's concessions to McGovern here is interesting. Muskie's defeat in this campaign was a personal disappointment, but not a personal tragedy.

From GOP State

He came into national politics comparatively late in life a Democrat in the Republican state of Maine. His personal life and ambitions were formed as a small-town lawyer long before he became a governor or senator, let alone a vice-presidential candi-date in 1968 or a frontrunner for the presidency in 1972.

Therefore, he had few dreams of national grandeur, and could withdraw from the battle here in Miami Beach with grace and even relief.

Humphrey was quite different. He spent his maturing years in the political pit as mayor of Min-Nixon, member of Congress, leader of the national political battles, Vice-President, and loser for the presidency by the narrowest of

Nobody can understand Humphrey who does not understand the political tradition of Minnesota. The politicians come to power early in Minnesota. Floyd Olson Harold Stassen and many others were all national figures, like Humphrey, in their early 30s, and the present governor of Minnesota, Gov. Wendell R. Anderson, who is here in Miami Beach, looks young enough to be a graduate student or even agile enough to be a tight end on the Minnesota Vikings Oddly, the principal figures of might not faded fast, except Humphrey. He stayed the course better than them all-and produced more effective progressive legislation than all of them combined but he stayed too long.

Hubert Humphrey didn't lose the Democratic presidential nom-ination here in Miami Beach, he lost it in Chicago in 1968. And he lost in Chicago because he was more faithful to Lyndon Johnson on Vietnam than he was to his own deepest beliefs about the war, and that finished him, and in his heart he knew it.

This campaign of 1972 was merely his last tragic effort to re-coup his losses. If Richard Nixon could come back from his loss to Kennedy in the presidential campaign of 1960 and his loss to Pat

Brown for the governorable of Humphrey was a little emotional California in 1962, then maybe Hubert could do it in 1972, or so he believed.

Fatal Blunder

It was an understandable but fatal personal blunder. He not only lost himself, but as the titular head of the Democratic party whose responsibility was to unite the Democrats, he divided them. Destroyed Muskie by cutting into the moderate Democratic vote, and hurt McGovern in the end by attacking him as an irrresponsible "radical" We will all see his charges against Mc-Govern on the Republican TV political commercials later in the

So Humphrey goes out now with the rest of the Old Guard, and it's probably right, but it's a little hard. This convention has been rough on the old geezers who kept the Democrats in power through one of the great chapters in American history, They didn't even give Mayor Daley a seat be hind the post in this hall, and even if that was good politics which is doubtful—it was bad

Galbraith, Populism and McGovern

By Wm. F. Buckley jr.

MIAMI BEACH.—Scene: BEC studios, at Convention Hall. The British anchorman, Robin Day, is tapping his fingers on the desk. The time is 2:58, and opposite him is an empty chair. At exactly 3 p.m. the satellite lodged high in the heavens by the military-industrial complex is scheduled to vouchsafe one of its beams for the purposes of transmitting the thoughts of Professor John Kenneth Galbraith from Convention Hall to the British people. And when a satellite bestows its favors on you, you need to put plenty of nickels into Three p.m., no Galbraith, 3:15, no Galbraith. Finally, he comes in, at 3:22. His trouble was that the security guards wouldn't let him into the booth section of the hall, because he didn't have the proper pass. That was a little bit like denying Peter the Grea access to St. Petersburg. There are few precedents for that kind of thing, though in future years John Kenneth Galbraith, in s sense the father of the McGovern convention, might wish to have been spared it, even as M. Guillotin must have wished to have been spared access to his inven-

Intellectual Patron

Galbraith, as I say, is probably the principal intellectual patron of the McGovern convention. He has given his enormous prestige to popularizing the kind of populism that Geoorge McGovern has ridden in on.

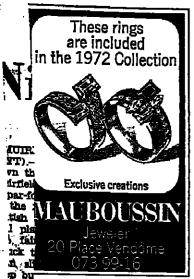

The principal domestic enthusiasm here is redistribution. And Professor Galbraith touches on the subject, in an article in the current Saturday Review, called "The Case for George McGovern." Mr. Galbraith take great pains to dissipate the that hovers droopily over all McGovern campfire meetings. It is the slogan: "Mc-Govern Is the Democratic Goldwater." Galbraith spots that as very dangerous to Democratic morale, so he proceeds to explain the principal differences between McGovern and Goldwater. "Goldwater was urging change in favor of the few and the rich. It was Barry Goldwater's romantic thought that the poor wanted more done for the rich, less for themselves. He wanted more freedom, which generally speaking, meant freedom for privileged to expand their preferred form of plunder. He is a nice man who brought a marked passion to his program for enriching the rich.

Now never mind that that account of Goldwater's candidacy preposterous, however amusing. It is even internally inconsistent, since if enhancing the rich was the principal meaning of the campaign, it is hard to understand how come Goldwater him, unless there are a lot more rich people in America than is generally supposed. More likely, they understood themselves to be voting for a principled man who believes the government ought to get to work and do what it's supposed to do better than it's been doing (curbing crime, providing for the national defense), and get its cotton-picking hands off what is no business of government (telling your children where to go to school and why, subsidizing everything from illegitimacy to ballet). But the myths are comfortable, alike to demagogues and college professors, and here is how they sound when they are written into cam-

"Deconcentrate." "Deconcentrate." says the Democratic draft platform "shared monopolies such as au' , steel and tire industries which administer prices, create une mployment through restricted doutput and stifle technological innovations." That passage precedes the usual stuff about the rich, and it is breath-axing in its effrontery, describing as it in its effrontery, describing as it the rich, and it is breath aking does the immunized practices of the large labor unions, protected in their monopolies by sweetheart laws not one of which has caught the critical eye of George McGovern—or his mentor, John Kenneth Galbraith. It is so much easier to sit back, and talk about taking it from the rich, who, by the way, are defined, by the working of McGovern economics, as anybody who earns

$12,000 a year. Very Old Hat

It is strange that, in Mismi Beach, they talk about "new" and "progressive" policies. Pro-fessor Galbraith's discovery of redistribution as a campaign issue comes sometime after the discovery of it in Athens by the hoi-polloi, and rediscovered at .quite inexhaustible lengths by Beatrice and Sidney Webb. It is very, very old hat, and one regrets the reactionary influence of Professor Galbraith on the Mc-

Opera Tenor Opts for Supper Clubs

By Henry Pleasants ONDON (IHT) .- One of the treasured legends of opera has Toscanini taking the late Geraldine Farrar to task during a rehearsal of "Madame Butterfly" at the Met during the season of 1908-09. Farrar sees fit to remind Toscanini that she is the star of this production. Toscanini responds: "Madame, the stars are in heaven."

As the story has come down to us—and it is not apocryphal— Toscanini is the hero, Farrar the villain. It is fashionable nowdays -and it was Toscanini who made it fashionable-to see in the composer a divinity, in the conductor a semi-divine intermediary, and in the performer, especially a mere singer, a humble servant who renders holy scripture under conductorial inspiration, guidance, direction and discipline,

Farrar remained unrepentant to the end of her days. "There were indeed stars in heaven," she conceded in her memoirs, "but there was also a human constellation that trod the Metropolitan boards to the renown of that institution and the gratification of the public; not to mention the box office."

She would find her views supported today by Sergio Franchi, which is one of the reasons that personable Italian tenor is singing, this month, at the Talk of the Town and not at the Royal Opera, Covent Garden. Another reason is that at Covent Garden he wouldn't be earning as much

"Toscanini was, of course, a great musician and a great conductor," he told me over coffee at the Churchill, "but he took a lot of the fun and excitement out of opera. Before his time there was a lot of difference between one singer's performance of an aria and another's. And it was that difference that made opera interesting and unpredicta-

With Toscanini's insistence on singing everything just as written, differences tended to diminish. Everybody, today, sings correctly, more or less. But the individual singer has fewer options. Some sing better than others, but they all sing the same notes, and pretty much the same way. It tends to be dull."

He speaks of opera with the fervor of an Italian who began his professional career as an opera singer, first in South Africa, where his family had immigrated from Cremona, later in Italy, singing the tenor leads in "Tosca," "La Bohème," "Madame Butter-"Rigoletto," etc. But he also speaks of opera with an Italian singer's requirement to have his own way with phrasing,

in opera before Toscanini's time. free to shape a song or aria according to his own lights, the conductor and the backing band following his lead. Franchi was helped to this discovery by a bit

He went to the United States in 1962, still an opera singer, and gave a debut recital in Carnegie Hall-opera arias and Neapolitan songs. He was not only a good singer, but also a very good-looking young male Italian. The first thing he knew he was on the Ed Sullivan Show, and the next thing he knew he was on the supper club circuit, mastering a supper club repertoire.

"It wasn't difficult," he recalls. "I never had to make the transition from an Italian operatic style to an American popular style. I could always do both. As a kid in Cremona I grew up on the records of Frank Sinatra and Perry Como. And as a young man I used to work a nightclub in Piacenza, singing "Slow Boat to China" and "Stardust." To prove the point, he promptly runs through the first four measures of "Stardust"—in Italian.

"But I'll tell you one thing," he continues. "Singing the supper clubs is a lot more work than singing opera. At the Flamingo in Las Vegas, where I sing about three months a year, it's two onehour sets seven nights a week. That's more singing in a week than an opera singer does in a month. And it's harder. In an opera you have pauses while the others are singing, and you have intermissions. In a supper club you're on your own every minute of the set... Of course, you earn more money, too . . .

"So the first thing you learn is to pace yourself, chat a bit, vary the songs so that you're not belting all the time, use a bit of falsetto, throw in some soft shoe dancing, or play some guitar. Above all, you learn to use your voice well. A lot of singing doesn't hurt a voice well used." Prenchi has not lost his love of opera, nor his love of singing in Italian. He even sings "If I Was a Rich Man" at the Talk of the Town, and does one chorusin Italian ("Se fosse ricco"). And he closes with "Vesti la glubba" from "Pagliacci."

"I'd like to sing opera again," the popular singer, where, once he says, wistfully, "although not, of course, for that kind of money. dentials, he is boss, just as he was Maybe a charity performance ..."

Now the climate has changed, and in the last four years a variety of public and private institutions have not only swung their doors open to her but are offering her specialized guidance in separate youth clinics geared to cope sympathetically with the partic-ular physical and emotional needs of youth. And new facilities are being established all the time.

While public opinion and, indeed, hospitals and medical and psychiatric authorities are far from accepting the idea that sexual activity in a girl barely out of elementary school is desirable behavior, the belief that protection is more crucial to that girl than proselytizing is spreading from hospital to hospital and clinic to clinic.

Planned Parenthood of New York City, the local arm of the pioneer in the birth control crusade, organized special programs in 1968 for teen-agers who had not given birth because, as Alfred Moran, executive vice-president explained, "We recognized the volume of pregnancies in adolescents and found ourselves providing contraceptives to youngsters who had given birth. We were in effect saying, 'We'll be glad to provide the protection if you buy the ticket of admission-one pregnancy'. And we were beginning to receive many requests from teen-agers for birth control." Last year, 38 percent of Planned Parenthood's 15,359 new patients were 19 years old or less.

The 56-year-old Margaret Sanger Research Bureau, a loosely affiliated branch of Planned Parenthood-World Population, which has long served the young, took the same step in February, 1971. "Young people traditionally T've never heard of any one turning a teen-ager away," said Dr. Edwin Daily, director of the health department's Maternity and Infant Care and Family Planning Project.

The upper age boundary for participation in the Sanger Teen Center is 18—in most organiza-tions it is 19—and in none of the institutions surveyed is there a minimum age requirement. "We simply feel it's immoral for a 12year-old (as well as ciden teenagers] to become pregnant." Dr. Lane said.

Many doctors question the thesis that the age of sexual activity has dropped. "Nobody knows that," said Dr. Iris Litt, assistant director of the Department of Pediatrics Division of Adolescent Medicine at Monteflore Hospital. 'We may have the statistics now. but we have no statistics for the

Some teen-agers view the question of age a bit differently. A 15-year-old attending the Sanger session observed, "When I started sleeping with boys last year, it was a big scandal in my class [then the ninth grade]. Now all the ninth graders are doing it. A 13-year-old once told Martha Drexier, the center's social worker, "I can't believe I'm the youngest one here." With some variations, mostly in the schedule of revisits for medical checkups, the procedure at the Sanger Bureau is typical.

When a girl calls for information, she is invited to the Thursday discussion session. Sometime during the afternoon, she will be given a physical examination. Boyfriends are invited not only to attend the discussion session but, subject to the girl's approval, to witness the pelvic exam. One girl whose boyfriend had watched recalled. "He made me feel so much better. He held my hand, and I was glad he cared enough to be there."

Asked for his reaction, the young man answered shyly, "It

While the discussion session is considered a mainstay in the treatment of a young girl, all the programs also offer individual counseling by doctors, nurses, social workers, health educators, trained volunteers and, when necessary, psychologists and psychia-

Promiscuity is not believed to be prevalent among the young. "They may be having sex frequently. Twanty-one percent (of the Mount Sinai patients] have been having it more than once a week, but most are not promiscuous," said Dr. Joan E. Morgenthau, director of Mount Sinai's adolescent services. "About 70 percent have only one partner. Anxiety about parental reaction ranks along with fear of pregnancy as a primary concern, and while the moral winds may be shifting, the teen-agers still do not find their parents accepting or understanding of the new free

New Process Makes Wool

'Wash and Wear'

NEW YORK, July 12 (IHT).-A new process that will make it possible to wash and dry wool fabrics in standard home machines has been developed by the International Wool Secre-

Called "Superwash," the process "represents a magnificent breakthrough in technology for the worsted-wool field," F. J. Colangelo, president of the Wool Bureau Inc., told Women's Wear Daily. "It will give the worsted industry added flexibility in easyperformance for a wide variety of end uses including handknitting yarns, worsted knits and sweaters, cut and sew fabrics, jerseys and other uses." he said. The Wool Bureau has issued licenses for the new process to two U.S. producers of worsted top: Wellman Inc. of Johnson-

ville, S.C., and The Top Co. I

Boston. Mr. Colangelo said that the treatment will let wool retain all of its traditional properties vet handle like a synthetic. pointing out that treated yarns would differ in no way in appearance from untreated ones, and said it was me who was tak- back. Being secretive takes away parent, that sex is wrong if you're not married."

While this was a common reaction, not all parents respond in the same manner. In fact, some of the young Sanger patients are enrolled at the instigation of their mothers, and other parent: view sexual morality as a matter of

Most teen-agers, experts agree, have a deep-seated desire for their parents to know. Kathy Hull, 17, who receives course credit at John Dewey High School in Brooklyn for her work as a Sanger volunteer, explained why. It's not a matter of guilt but of furtiveness, she said. "I felt sad that my mother didn't know, that I was sneaking behind my parents' ing them. She was very upset, from the pleasure. When my she said she had failed as a mother found out, I felt better." Where does all this leave the beleaguered parents? Clearly, they are caught in a painful dilemme. If they approve contraception for the teen-ager. they believe they are giving con-donation; if they forbid it, they

subject their children to the risks of pregnancy. Alfred Moran is not only a Planned Parenthood executive, he is also the father of a 15-year-old daughter. "I have told her I don't think she should have sexual in-tercourse," he said. "As a parent wouldn't provide her with contraception, but I would expect the Planned Parenthood office in my community to do something. It is now right to expect the doctor to provide help."

MONACO: Dining at a Grand Hotel

By Naomi Barry

MONTE CARLO (IET).—The greater the grand hotel, the duller its restaurant.

Now, in a surprising change of the axiom, gourmets suddenly are appearing at the Hôtel de Paris in Monte Carlo. On July 8, its cuisine received the Clé d'Or de la Gastronomie from the Guide Gault and Millau, designating it as the best restaurant in the principality. On July 9, the Club des Cent, the most august gastronomic society of France, cele-brated its 60th anniversary with a dinner for 30 at the Hötel de Paris. It was the first time the club had ever come to Monte Carlo.

The carefully studied five-course dinner began in the classic manner with a cup of sorrel soup which was followed by a sea bass braised with lettuce. A saddle of veal Orloff recalled the Russian grand dukes who made the Riviera Iashion-Green string beans with butter were the vegetable course. Dessert was a souffie of delicate white strawberries.

For the club's loup de mer, chef Sebastien Bonsignore enveloped the fish in blanched leaves of lettuce set upon a bed of finely chopped shallots. The bass is then braised in the oven well doused in a liquid composed of 50 percent fish fumet and 50 percent sauterne.

Among other Bonsignore specialties are noulllettes (thin, flat egg noodles) whose quality rivals any pasta to be found in neighboring Italy.

Once cooked, the nouillettes (more familiar under their Italian name of tagliarini) are packed in a ring mold and placed in a simmering bainmarie for a few minutes. The center of the crown, when unmolded, is filled with a cream sauce enriched with beaten egg yolks, cubes of fole gras, dice of black truffles and bits of ham. The result

Another Bonsignore high point is a soufflé with truffles and scampi. Of equal excellence is his fresh foie gras which meets the most demanding standards. However, the bouillabaisse en gelée, rapidly becoming a new summer favorite in a number of restaurants, still needs a little work. The idea of a melange of boned fish in an aniseflavored, jellied madrilene is an excellent one. But for the moment, the gelée is a little too thick and

Also under Bonsignore's jurisdiction is the hotel's top floor grill with a view over coast and sea. Although the emphasis is on grilled meats, fish and chicken, the menu does offer such stars from the downstairs room as the fole gras. I particu-larly liked the fresh grilled sardines.

My favorite dish, however, is not cooked at all. Pilets of sea bass, cut into small strips, are marinated for a day in lemon juice with a julienne of raw carrots basil corlander. It is served with salt, pepper and a dribble of oil and is a feature of the Maona, the hotel's supper club at the beach.

The statistics, covering 61 open and closed-end mutual funds (excluding special bond funds), show buying of Japanese equities by these institutions last month exceeded sales by 6.7 billion yen (about $21.7 million). In the same period, the funds purchased a net 6.7 billion yen of foreign securities. They also bought a net 225 billion yen of bonds of all varieties. #### Hoesch-Hoogovens Merger Official Western Europe's third-largest steel concern has been formally created by the establishment of a joint holding company merging Hoesch, of West Germany, and Koninklijke Nederlandsche Hoogovens en Staalfabrieken, of Holland. Hoesch says the new central company, Estel NV Hoesch-Hoogovers, was founded last Friday at Arnhem. Holland, after shareholders of both operating companies approved the merger at their annual meetings this spring. The Hoesch-Hoogovens concern will have a crude steel production capacity of 11 million tons a year-third-largest after British Steel Corp. and August Thyssen-Exusts AG and group sales of about 8 billion deutsche marks. It employs about 75,000 people.

Parity Move Seen Aid to U.S. Trade

Economist Says Shift Could Be $8 Billion

WASHINGTON, July 11 (Reuters).-Princeton University economist William Branson forecast today that last December's parity realignment will enhance the U.S. balance of trade by $7.96 billion when fully effective-probably at end of 1973.

His estimates, published by the Brookings Institution, but based on a model compiled before the sterling flotation, indicates that the realignment will boost U.S. exports by 10.09 percent, or $4.44 billion, and reduce imports by 8.34 percent, or $3.52 billion. The estimates do not attempt to forecast the actual change in the U.S. trade account, but only the impact of the realignment on the balance over time.

Asked to what extent a return to a $2.40 parity for sterling would adversely affect the estimates, the editor of the Brookings Papers, Arthur Okun, said a ball-park figure could be $1

Mr. Okun, a former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said that such a return to pre-December parity by Britain could shave between $800 and $1.5 billion off the Branson estimate for a U.S. trade balance improve-

The largest contribution to the improvement in the U.S. accounts would derive from Japan, according to Mr. Branson. He estimated that the realignment, which included an overall 16.88 percent upward revaluation of the yen in terms of the dollar, would in time bite $6.2 billion off the Japanese trade surplus.

The Japanese revaluation would boost the country's imports by $1.77 billion while reducing its exports by $4.45 billion, he estimat-

The second-largest contribution would be from West Germany, whose trade balance would suffer a $5.16 billion eventual deterioration from the overall 13.58 percent deutsche mark revaluation. according to the study. German exports should be shorn of $3.7 billion and its imports inflated by $1.43 billion. Other countries likely to suffer net balance-of-trade losses attributable to the realignment include: Britain (minus $1.1 billion -based on the pre-float parity). the Netherlands (minus $760.5 million), Switzerland (minus (minus $686.3 million), France (minus $213.5 million) and Austria (minus $197.8 million).

Monsanto Says Profit May Be Up in Quarter

ST. LOUIS, July 12 (AP-DJ).-Monsanto's second-quarter earnings were better than anticipated and equalled or slightly bettered the $30.5 million, or 88 cents a share, earned the year before, James J. Kerley, financial vice-president, said today.

Net income for the quarter was between $30.7 million, or 88 cents, and $32 million. or 92 cents, he said. Sales increased about 4 percent to between $560 million and $565 million from $539.8 million last year, he added.

On the outlook for the second half, he said that "we have every reason to believe our profit performance will exceed the 90 cents a share earned in 1971."

year-to-year improvement in sales was virtually across the board with the exception of the sale of crop protection chemicals.

He pointed out that fibers and plastics continued their earlier rates of improvement, and there was a pickup in the demand for heavy industrial chemicals.

He emphasized that the improved earnings have not resulted from price increases but rather are "the result of higher volumes very much improved utilization of some facilities and the continuing impact of cost improvement measures taken during the past two

Imperial Tobacco Profit Up 12.7%

LONDON, July 12 (AP-DJ).— Imperial Tobacco Group Ltd. said today its net profit was £26.7 million in the current half-year, a rise of 12.7 percent over the £23.7 million earned in the yearearlier period.

Imperial, which declared an unchanged interim dividend of 1.875 pence, said sales were £653.6 million, up 6.5 percent from £618.3 million a year ago.
Imperial said the tobacco division showed a small increase in profit while the food side "maintained its growth and achieved a further improvement in results." The paper, board and packaging division showed some recovery in profit.

The company said that if a satisfactory settlement of a pay dispute affecting tobacco-division production is achieved, trading profit in the second half should not fall below that of the yearearlier period. Investment income should rise slightly and interest charges should decline, it said. Nevertheless, Imperial noted that rising costs are eroding profit

Stock Prices Turn Down in Late Trading

Curtiss-Wright Slumps By Another 10 Points

By Vartanig G. Vartan NEW YORK, July 12 (NYT) .-Bursts of selling in Curtiss-Wright and in airline issues joited the New York Stock Exchange in late trading today as prices fell again amid a pickup in volume. Curtiss-Wright plunged 9 7/8 to 36 1/8.

The result was this week's third straight decline—a time span that coincides with the Demo-cratic National Convention in Miami Beach-in the Dow Jones industrial average.

The blue-chip Dow, shead by more than 3 in a brief morning rally, slipped 2.18 at the final bell to finish at 923.69. That brought its decline so far this week to 14.37.

It also placed the Dow midway in the 920-925 resistance level that has marked lower limits of price movements in recent months. Some technical observers believe that a decisive penetration of this level on the downside might send the Dow into the high 800s before the market steadies

Market 'Oversold' On the other hand, the "over-sold" nature of market indicators could trigger a sharp near-term rally. The shock impact of Curtiss-

Wright's plunge was unmistakable in the voice of one broker as he asked rhetorically: "How much lower can it go?" Exactly one week ago, the common shares of Curtiss-Wright, a stock that acquired quick Wall Street glamour because of its stake in the Wankel rotary engine, sold at a record price of 59 1/4. Since that peak, it has traded downward in crunching jolts, sometimes not opening for an entire day, as was the case yesterday because of an influx of selling orders.

Shortly before 2:30 p.m. today, the stock opened on a big block at 36 1/2, then traded for only a few minutes before transactions once again were halted. It was the market's biggest percentage loser. Second place in that category went to the company's class "A" stock, off 11 1/2 to 46 1/2 before it. too, was halted from further trading. Skepticism on potentials for the DJ).-U.S. business inventories rose $1.18 billion in May to a seasonally adjusted $184.4 billion from the upward revised $183.22 billion in April, when stocks had climbed $710 million, the Commerce Department reported today, May sales climbed about 1 percent to an adjusted $122.01 billion from April's $121.2 billion, the report showed. The report showed that retail sales climbed 2 percent to an adjusted 536.9 billion, while sales by wholesalers dropped to $24.1 hillion from $24.17 billion in April-

$2 million a month, company officials said. Donald C. Campbell. president of Financial Programs. said the figure is twice what it was a year ago. He said the funds in May, the latest month for which figures are available, had total redemptions of about $4 million and sales of about $2

"The old methods of selling mutual funds are no longer valid," he said. The company is developing new techniques "because we're in this business to make money . . , changes are needed to improve sales." He said the change is expected to eventually produce a "significant increase

Churchill Falls, billion dollar project, Canada's answer to its burgeoning needs for power.

All progress depends upon ideas plus the means to translate them into reality. Morgan Stanley began to analyze financing feasibility for Churchill Falls over 15 years ago. The Firm structured and developed a financing program in the succeeding years, working with the project planners and Canadian and U. K. financial advisers. This led to the $500 million private placement in the U.S. completed three years ago, the largest ever done at that time. That placement, together with substantial funds obtained from Canadian sources, became the key to translating a nundred-year-old dream into the reality of today which was recognized in the June, 1972 dedication.

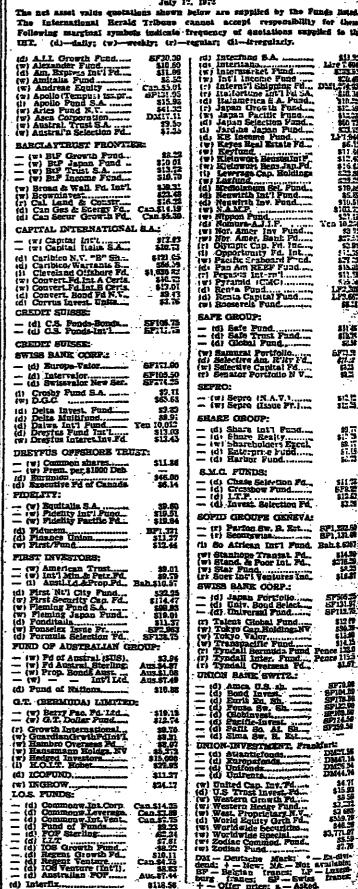

Morgan Stanley has broad experience in designing financial plans and raising capital for the development of major construction projects throughout the world.

Strong demand continues to outpace production

With world sales totalling 186,354 cars and 18,898 motorcycles, BMV can took back on one of the most successful years in the Company's history. Demand continued to exceed productive capacity end extended delivery detes at home and ebroad could not be avoided. The times-Marsix-cylinder models have been perticularly successful, together with cars in the two-door four-cylinder range, and car sales rose by 4.7%. Renewed world interest in motorcycles brought an Increase in sales of 58.1 % over 1970.

Total turnover rose by 10.6 % to Dat 1,907 million, of which foreign sales represented 40.8%, but 1971 was again marked by heavy increases in both personnel und material costs. These could only partly be countered by Intensive rationalisation and severe cuts In administrative overheads; so that price incresses proved unavoidable, Earnings were reduced by 5.9% to DM 32.2 million; in Billy's long-term interest the sum of DM 5 million transferred to the reserves, however, must be regarded as rather low.

The fifty second Annual Meeting of Bayerische Motoren Werke AG, held in Munich on July 7 1972, voted a dividend of DM 6 per DM 50 share on the share a ceptial of DM 200 million, equivalent to an unchanged 12%, and DM 3 per DM 50 share on the DM 50 million issued in July last year. 7

Production

All BMW factories produced at maximum capacity throughout 1971. Production of cars rose by 2.2% to 164,701 units and of motorcycles by 52.8% to 18,772 units.

While every effort was made to increase production still turther, particular attention was paid to continual improvement of BMW's quality standards.

Sales and Service The EEC has developed into one huge domestic market, accounting for no less than 71.6% of BMW car production in 1971. Total car sales abroad increased by 11.9%, while 75% of motorcycle production was exported to fifty-six.

BMW exports are handled by 139

Importers and 2,785 dealers. Additions to this network are based on criteria of quality rather than quantity.

A total of DM 153.6 million was Invested in fixed assets, somewhat less than the figure originally planned. On the one hand BMW concentrated on further eutomation and rationalisation of production, on the other the new test center north of Munich was completed, one of the most modern in Europe.

Research and Development

Car design is increasingly Influenced by worldwide safety require-ments. While BMW continues to keep pace with passive safety regulations on the American pattern, its leadership in the area of active safety will be maintained and

Motor Sport

The continuing flow of successes in tailles and on racing circuits around the world confirms the performance potential und advanced engineering of BMW products.

Orders, production and sales at BMW In the first quarter of 1972 were all higher than in 1971 and above the average for the eutomobile industry as a whole. Recent capital increases and further careful use of long-term finance have pro-vided a sound base for the realisation of the Company's corporate objectives.

BMW can look towards the future with confidence. For further information about BMW please write to

Our new subsidiary in Paris Manufacturers Hanover Banque Nordique is a unique entry to world markets.

Manufacturers Hanover Trust has acquired a majority interest in Banque Nordique de Commerce. A French bank, it uniquely combines the specific expertise of four of Scandinavia's strongest banks and the worldwide capability of a $14 billion U.S. bank.

This latest addition to MHT's growing global network - renamed Manufacturers 'Hanover Banque Nordique — strengthens our ability to serve U.S. multinational companies operating in France, as well as major European firms conducting business on an international scale.

With a capital base of close to 100 million francs, Manufacturers Hanover Banque Nordique becomes the largest American-controlled bank in France in terms of capital funds.

This strong capital base enables the bank. to meet the financing needs of corporate customers at attractive, competitive rates.

Manufacturers Hanover Banque Nordique. There's no bank quite like it - on either side of the Atlantic.

Vive la différence!

BRIDGE

On this deal North-South had able game, and persevered to the to face some active bidding by their opponents, who were motivated by the vulnerability. West made a very light overcall in hearts over one spade, and East introduced his diamonds at the five level. He would have retreated to five hearts if doubled, but he took the chance to direct his partner's lead if North-South went to five spades.

Five hearts doubled would have east East-West 500 points (down four for 700 is possible at doubledummy). But South was not inclined to accept a non-vulnerable penalty in exchange for a vulner-hazardous contract of five spades. West duly led a diamond, and East defended normally by taking two diamond tricks and shifting to a heart. This gave South the opportunity he needed. He won the heart ace—the finesse was clearly a loser-ruffed his diamond loser and ran all his trumps.

West found it painful to discard on the last trump. He had to keep the heart king, so he played a club and was left with a doubleton club king. The club finesse then gave South the last three tricks and his contract.

East's teammates were quick to point out to him that he could have beaten five spades, in various improbable ways: by shifting to a heart at the second trick instead of the third; shifting to a club at the second trick; or shifting to a club at the third

THE LEVANTER

By Eric Ambier. Alheneum. 307 pp. $6.95.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

To see an ordinary man thrust into an extraordinarily difficult situation and rising to the challenge is one of the most shugly satisfying scenes in fiction. Those of us who are also ordinary—a comfortable majority—can easily identify with such a protagonist. Even to the degree that enables us to make the pleasant assumption that we too, if necessary, could rise to a temporary heroists.

It is possible that the arche-typal or full-time here has no basis in real life, that he is a creature of fiction, drama, mythology or television. Only someone with a profound death with someone bored beyond car-ing or jaded to the point where nothing but risking his life could arouse him, would qualify as a professional hero.

Who can believe in James Bond? Are all his tortures and wounds worth the brief hours he spends in this or that beautiful woman's arms? Can we serious ly expect a cynic of his stripe to be motivated by the rather abstract patriotism of peacetime politics? He is no more real than a comic strip.

In "Levanter," that old master Eric Ambler gives us someone we can believe in: one Michael Howell, head of Agence Howell, "fractionally British" man descended from a Lebanese-Armenian grandmother and 2 Syrian-born father. Though he describes himself in true antihero fashion, as a "Legantine mongrel," that British iraction-keeps him within empathy range. Howell has inherited a family business that acts as selling agents throughout the Middle East and operates a fleet of small cargo vessels in the eastern Mediterranean. As the story opens, Syria has just become a one-party state, and Howell is trying to salvage his business in-terest there. The maneuvering he goes through in doing this is both a fastinating chess game and a series of satirical insights into the internal affairs of such countries.

In a modest concession to the current suspense tradition, Ambier has given Howell a beautiful mistress, one Teresa, who is also his office manager in Damascus. It is her noticing some unusual items in his inventory that leads them to make a midnight visit to the company factory, where they find a splinter group of Arab terrorists trying to build Howell and Teresa are forced. at gunpoint, to join the terrorists, and Salah Ghaled, leader of the terrorists, also commandeers Howell's expertise in the design of the detonators.

As Teresa puts it, Howell is not merely one man, but a committee in permanent session. He is an earthy Greek moneychanger; a devious Armerian bazzar trader; a stuffy, no-nonsense English engineer; a smooth, sophisticated young man of affairs, and so on. All there facets are needed, each in its turn, to outwit not only Ghaled, but also

Dr. Hawa, the minister of Syra newly created Department Industrial Development. Howell is a good character the plot is brilliant, but dramatic impact of the book diluted by having the story of by three people: Howell, Tel-

the events after the fact. Indirection seems to be a chir verlsimilitude, but Ambler n have been craftier than nee sary. A slow beginning—and h one is very slow—violates in fundamental premise of this is of writing. The suspense is for ed to mount a futiguingly grade incline.

Both the author and characters do, however, rie the occasion, which deserves have its denouement withheld the delectation of those was forward to curling up with T Levanter." Let us not, to it titlilation of part-time land sdmit impediment.

NEW YORK, July 12 (NYT). Joe Frazier was in the cakpaneled living room of the 'g when the blow fell. A mockingbird was singing from a tupelo gum outside the open window, and the faintest of breezes stirred the Spanish moss festooning the live caks, Summertime, and the living was easy when the radio brought word that the heavyweight champion of all creation was champior no onger in Oklahoma. "Oklahoma," Joe Frazier said,

"Where's that at? I don't recall 20 fights there."

As a matter of fact, there rasn't been a good scrap in In-tian territory since the Treaty Medicine Lodge, but the Oklahoma Boxing Commission, in a tizzy over a proposed match between Oscar Bonavena and George Foremen in Oklahoma City in the fall, has announced that it would borrow Frazier's title for the benefit of the promotion and recognize the winner as champion. "I heard about it two days ago," Joe said over the telephone, "and I called Yank. He said it was just Dick Sadler be-hind it, Foreman's manager. Does George want a fight? I'll give him one, any time, any place. I don't think Yank would have no objection about that" Other Forces

Even as Frazier spoke, Yank Durham, his manager, was lendng a receptive ear to Murray oodman's offer of a $500,000 arantee to box Foreman in the assau Coliseum on Long Island. Since taking fungo practice on Ali's profile in their 85-million go-round in March, 1971, Frazier has defended the championship twice-against Terry Nobody in New Orleans and Ron Nobody in Omaha. Would he say no to a suggestion that he fight Ali once more and retire?

"I'd say yeah. Anytime, anywhere. We just waiting for him, when he wants to light. He's taking somebody clas every other month and every time he says, I want Joe Frazier, I want Joe Frazier.' Nobody's holding him. We just waitin' on him, waitin' on him." Meanwhile, Frazier takes his ease on the 368 acres he bought for $158,500 in his native Beaufort County, S.C. (pronounced Bewfort). To reach the plants-tion, you take the state road out of Yemassee (pop. 700) till you or te to a drive flanked by mosshung caks with a sign at the entrance displaying doves and the name Frazier. (On the back of the sign the name Brewton still appears. From 1755 on the plantation was occupted either by Brewtons or by McPhiersons.)

There are three residences besides the main house. The first is occupied by Joe's sister, Rebecca, another by a brother, and in the third Joe's sister Julia lives with their mother, Miss Dolly. Among other permanent residents are black bass and alligators. Soon there will be cattle and The corn is up and cucumbers are growing and snap beans and butter beans.

"All them guys," he said, mean-ing guys like Patterson and Ali Foreman, "keep fightin" among themselves. Seems like somebody'd want to take a shot at the title. Me, I'm not going outside of the top 10 no more. "I feel good. It's a mile from here to the front gate and I run out and back every morning before breakfast. I'm still eatin' soul food and keeping my weight

Pedaling Around France Gives Cyclists an Appetite—and Thirst

COLOMIERS, France, July 12 (UPI).—The 113 racers of the Tour de France cycling race have now pedaled their coun-tries' honor through nine road stages. But in the first few hours of each stage, the cyclists have had quite a different burden to shoulder—food. During the first eight stages of this year's tour, cyclists consumed 246 pounds of sugar, 4,480 apple tartes, 2,080 rice cakes, 2,080 custard cakes, 572 pounds of prunes, 1,276 pounds of bananas, 440 pounds of apples, 440 pounds of pears and peaches, 330 pounds of oranges and 200 liters (226 quarts) of tea, lemonade and mineral water, all neatly stored away in their bike

One of the racers who is now wishing he had not eaten so much is France's Marino Martinez, who is one of the few racers to have put on weight during the tour. This has become a particular problem here in the mountains. So Martinez has been dutifully skipping meals normally served in midcourse and even emptying goodies from his well-

Jackin had a curious round. He started with a bogle five and tween played some devastating golf, driving soundly and getting stroke that has eluded him in recent weeks. He made five birdies with a putt from 18 feet on the third, a four-iron to within two feet on the fifth and another medium iron to a couple of yards on the eighth. And then putts from 16 feet on the 11th and from 12 feet for a deuce on the 13th as the ball ringed the cup and fell in from the back "I got more of the putts you have to hole than for a long time." said Tony. tennis tournament for the past two years, today was readmitted to the competition-for the second time this year—at a brief special meeting before the start of the International Lawn Tennis Pederation's annual session.

And then at the session, HATF ratified by an "overwhelming majority" the peace agree-ment with the World Championship Tennis pro group. That decision was expected. The agreement will enable all pros to play at the U.S. Open in Porest Hills,

N.Y., in September.
The vote was 232-15. The coposing votes came from some of the East European delegates, inchiding the Russicas.

According to the agreement, WCT boss Lamar Hunt now stops signing players. All his present contracts will expire by 1976, Other points in the agreement are that the WOT accepts the International Federation as the governing body for all tennis.
The WCT will not compete with the ILTF over traditional ILTF tournaments, and an greed calendar will be set up between to two parties. WCT players will be free to play in ILTF tournaments outside a 16-week period from January to May, reserved for

Banned in 1976

The decision on South Africa was taken at a meeting which lasted less than 20 minutes. South Africa was banned from the cup in 1970 when it was ruled its participation would endan-ger the competition. The previous year matches were disrupted when Poland and Czechoslovakia withdrew in successive rounds when scheduled to face South Africa. South Africa was barred last year for the same reason but in London in January, they were reinstated for the 1973 competition on the grounds that they had relaxed their apartheid policy in

But the London decision provoked many protests and after the Soviet Union and Czechoalovakia threatened to withdraw, the ban was re-imposed at a meeting of the Davis Cup Nations in Copenhagen in April. Another meeting of the special in Helsinki. The committee re-opened its discussions here last night but were unable to reach a decision because of the absence of the Soviet delegate. At today's meeting it was decided South Africa would compete in the South American zone of the 1973 tournament to prevent disruption by the withdrawal of various European zone nations on political grounds.

Alf Chalmers, president of the South African Lawn Tennis Union, said after the meeting: "We feel this decision is a vindication of the SALTU efforts on behalf of tennis, especially after the disappointing result of the Copenhagen meeting."

The ILTF also rejected a Soviet proposal to expel South Africa from the federation. It was defeated by 192 votes to 61 after a one-hour debate.

The Veterans of '68

MIAMI, Fla.—A group of vet-erans had a reunion here in Miami this week to celebrate the fourth anniversary of the Chicago Democratic war of 1968.

The veterans, many of v. hem had brought their families, were a balder and many had paunches. They much, and drank too much and

Buchwald veteran said wistfully, as he sipped a bourbon in the Boom Boom Room of the Fontainebleau Potel. "The never forget trying to get back to my room at the Conrad Hilton, I was hit by four cops, maced by a state trooper and run over by a National Guard jeep." Another veteran sitting next to him asked, "Remember, Harry, when we tried to raise the American flag in Grant Park. 2 squad of mounted policemen trampled us to the ground with their horses?"

"Do I remember?" Harry re-plied. "You saved my life, Freddy. You threw yourself on a tear gas grenade."

Another veteran asked, "Did I ever tell you what happened to me on Michigan Avenue? I was walking along the sidewalk and two motorcycle cops came zoom-ing down on me.

LONDON, July 12 (AP).-A collection of 16th-century Italian drawings fetched a record £472.160—about ($1.15 million) at Sotheby's auction rooms Tuesday.

The sale of part of Sir Thomas Lawrence's collection of old master drawings, which was one of the finest in England, comprised 98 drawings. Most were by Lodovico, Agostino and Annibale

The previous record price for 3 sale of drawings was £199.000about $480,000—at Sotheby's in

"I jumped out of the way of one, got hit by the second and knocked into the street, then was thrown into a paddywagon and charged with disturbing the peace!" Harry said. "They don't have Democratic conventions like that, anymore. The young kids just don't have the courage we did." A veteran named Charley agreed, "All the kids want to do these days is nominate someone. They want the candidate handed to them on a silver platter, They don't know you have to fight for what you get in politics."

"You can say that again," Freddy said. "Where would Hu-bert Humphrey be today if we hadn't fought for Chicago?" "Or Ed Muskie?" someone else

"Chicago was the great one." Harry said. "Itli go down in history with Belleau Woods and Midway and Iwo Jima. You know, I try to tell my kids what it was like in Chicago in 1968. but they don't want to hear any-

"Neither do my kids," a veteran said. "To them it's history. But if we hadn't taken Chicago there woudn't be a Democratic party today. A party united, one for all and all for one."

Another veteran said, "I'd like to go back to chicago with my family and see it now. I'd like to visit State Street and show them where we were cut off for tirree days by Mayor Daley's fire

"I hear it's all built up and you can hardly see the war damage." Freddy said.

"I gave a candy bar and a pack of cigarettes to a girl in Chicago, I wonder whatever happened to her," Harry said. A group of young people came into the Boom Boom Room handing out McGovern stickers.

"Look at them," a veteran said scornfully, "When we were their age, we were attacking the stockyards with stones and sticks, and throwing our bodies across the highway, all for the Democratic party. And what are they doing? Handing out stickers in the Boom Boom Room. What's happened to the moral fiber of the Democratic party?"

"It's gone," said Freddy, "All gone. That's what happens when you make young kids delegates to a national convention."

Dictionary supplement leaves Victoria far behind by including 'the more notorious of the sexual words.'

Bringing Oxford English Up to Date

By Israel Shenker

CONTROL OF THE CONTRO

OXFORD, England (NYT).—The harmless drudges who have spent 15 years preparing a supplement to the Oxford English Dictionary—that monument to the arbitrary splendor of the English tongue are finally ready to declare a 1,356-page dividend.

Oxford's heirs to Samuel Johnson, author of the first great English dictionary-it was he who defined lexicographer as "a harmless drudge"-have not written the last word in the first of three volumes that will constitute the supplement.

When Volume 1 emerges here in October, and in New York in November, it will cover English langauge development from 1884 to the present, from A to G. A to Z in the original 15,487 pages of the OED, emerged in the years 1834 to 1928, and the first supplement followed in 1933. Oxford then slumbered while English leaped on.

The Editor

In 1957 the local lords of language decided to catch hold again, and recruited Robert V. Burchfield as editor. Mr. Burchfield had come to Oxford as a Rhodes scholar in 1949 from his native New Zealand. He had become a specialist in medieval English, and he still teaches it here at St. Peter's College.

He knew little about lexicography, but he did know Charles T. Onions, one of the four editors of the original OED and one of the two editors of the 1933

"Onions said that lexicography is best done on the kitchen table." Mr. Burch-field said. "He didn't believe in computer techniques. photostas, typewriters. The only way to do it was to get people to read books, scientific evidence and then settle the dictionary on their backsides at the kitchen table.

"He also argued strongly that you should never submit to a deadline . . . There are people who want you to pause for a year while a field worker goes out to determine who says genuine [rhymes with gin] and who says genuine [rhymes with wine]. There are no natural limits to words. If you want to give more and more information, you may be led up the garden

There is a powerful dollop of alien leaven. As Mr. Burchfield notes in the supplement's introduction: "We have made bold forays into the written English of regions outside the British Isles . . ."

A historical dictionary lives or dies by its quotations.

"The OED virtually concordanced the early writers-Chaucer, Malory, Langland, and just about every singular occurrence of a word is in the dictionary," Mr. Burch-

"If you move to the 20th century, you can't put in every word that Robert Graves.
W. H. Auden, Stephen Spender and W. B.

Yeats have used." His staff tried to determine which would be central and enduring terms in the newer disciplines. "You have got to be a bit of a forecaster," Mr. Burchfield said. "Take linguistics. Noam Chomsky came up like a comet, and his subject has produced a whole group of words. We have generative grammar, transformational grammar, kernel sentences, rewrite rules, tree diagrams."

The supplement staff numbers a score of specialists. "Twenty sophsticated people's time is all I can organize," Mr. Burchfield said, "or 20 people's sophisticat-

The sophisticated Anthony J. Augarde. who was at Oxford reading English when his tutor. Mr. Burchfield, recruited him to the cause, observed:

"In theory you should end up with encyclopedic knowledge. In practice you don't. A word I've worked on will ring a bell if I hear it again, but I probably won't remember what it means, so this isn't a way to improve your vocabulary. I hate Scrabble."

Sexual Words'

When work began on the supplement, no general English dictionary contained what Mr. Burchfield calls "the more notorious of the sexual words." But, as the modernday editor proclaims, resorting to French for his sexual resolution: "Nous avons changé tout cela."

The supplement leaves the Victorian OED firmly behind and catalogues current usages, including the common copulative (first citation about 1503).

Mr. Burchfield collected a freelance reading staff among academics all over Britain who agreed to read within the period 1884 to the present. About a hundred readers were finally at work, each getting roughly a dollar an hour. The oldest reader was the Rev. H.E.G.

Rope, a cleric in his 90s, whose name is on the list of those who contributed to the OED itself. R.A. Auty, a retired schoolmaster, was the most prolific paid reader: He went through 900 books, including most of T.S. Eliot, D.H. Lawrence, James Joyce, The Times 1958-67, The Times Literary Supplement 1930-38 and thickets of lingulatics, cricket and bridge.

Mr. Burchfield printed appeals for help. which were slipped into copies of the Periodical, a quarterly givesway from the Oxford University Press. The first appeal, in 1958, was a seven-page list of words beginning with A (road class) and ending with akka (slang for piastre). Each word had beside it a date indicating the earliest use which the Oxford staff had managed to find. By 1961 Mr. Burchfield's appeals had reached their last word: zwitterionic (zwitterion is "a molecule or ion that has warate positively and negatively charged groups; a dipolar ion". Readers were challenged to document uses earlier than those listed.

"It produced an enormous response," Mr. Burchfield recalled. "Those who wrote in absolutely demolished the original

Handwritten

The combined staffs of all Oxford dictionaries come together each afternoon for a cup of tea and an extended exchange

They abhor typewriters. All slips prepared by the staff, and virtually all citations turned in by readers, are handwritten as is all material submitted to the printers.

The supplement will cite authors and speakers from King Alfred (849-899) on, Adiai Stevenson gets credit for brinkmanship and egghead, Dwight D. Eisenhow r for applying the domino to strategy. (His actual phrase in 1954 was "the Talling domino' principle.")

A third volume will include a list of the 40,000 books cited. Michael Grose, the supplement's bibliographer, calls this "adding the veneer of bibliographical respec-

About 25,000 copies of the supplement (A to G) will make up the first printing, to sell for $50 in the United States. The supplement has thus far cost $840,000 to produce. The second volume (H-P) is scheduled for publication in 1975, the third

Meanwhile, the scholars are now deep in L. Unless some zany neologism emerges before 1977, the final volume will conclude with an appropriately ultimate zzz. Anyone who gets that far will deserve his

PEOPLE: Doing a Double Take On Watermelon Wome

A twice-loid tale from Les Version 1. Police reported that Miss Ofena Jones dropped a 51pound watermelon from a second story window onto O. C. Henry, her boyfriend with whom she had just had an argument over a welfare check. Henry reportedly suffered severe injuries including two broken ribs and a punctured lung. The undamaged watermeion, police said, was being held as evidence. Version 2. "We've checked it all out now," said police Com-mander Pete Hagan, "and there isn't a seed of truth to it." The story started as a joke at the 77th St. division of the police department, Hagan said. when patrol officer Gary Lowden and his partner, Larry Whitman, were talking about a large watermeion they had purchased. It seems that everyone who entered the station that night was intrigued by the watermeion there. Finally some mankster, still un-identified, made out a report saying the melon was being held as evidence and the tall tale about Ofens Jones and O.C. Henry was hatched. Somehow the story got onto the police blotter as legitimate and the story made its way into the press and cate the airways. Hagan said the department has begun an investigation to see out false information. "It really isn't funny, it's quite ember-

if any policeman deliberately gave rassing," he said, adding that if there was hanky-panky those responsible might be given a few days suspension without pay.

Having read the above, a grain of sait may be the proper cond:ment for this. It was apparently a busy night for a holdup man who, police suspect, expped off a string of four holdups in Hollywood and four in the San Fernando Valley, in one night, by sticking up the Studio City (Callfornia) bar early yesterday. After forcing nine cistomers to lie on the floor, the bandit took over the bass dram, accompanying the regular entertainer, au organist. One of the customers jumped up and ran out while the robber was busy with the crum. The bandit chased him and fired three shots, all missed. The robber came back to the bar and demanded the money from the till. "You got-it the first time." replied bertender Joe Pother, tricking the intruder into leaving. Police
